A Musical Medicine Show

Bossin's Home Remedy for Nuclear War

Theatrical Musical
Comedy! Snake Oil!

Bossin's Home Remedy for Nuclear War is a one-man musical medicine show—songs, comedy, satire and even a bit of magic. A musical about nuclear war? No, a musical that will prevent nuclear war!

~~5000~~
3000 Bottles Sold!

Bossin's Home Remedy for Nuclear War has been seen from Queen Charlotte City, B.C. to Sydney, N.S. It has been presented by The Vancouver East Cultural Centre, Great Canadian Theatre Company and Winnipeg's Prairie Theatre Exchange. It has consistently received standing ovations, and glowing reviews.

Synopsis

As the lights go up, Doctor Bossin arrives with his suitcase full of bottles. He warns the audience of the dread disease that "many of you may not even realize you've got—Nuclear Numbness." However, unlike the products of his competitors (for instance Mulroney's Irish Snake Oil, or Turner's Rosedale Water) his is a remedy that really works—and he promises to prove it by the end of the evening. This he proceeds to do: using songs, slides, and chicanery. He assumes various roles: a cross-bow salesman, a NATO general, a Russian visitor, a Nicaraguan spy, Ronald Reagan. Eventually he proves that, with Bossin's Home Remedy, "you personally can save the world and prevent nuclear war in your spare time."

If you haven't heard a Bob Bossin song played by Stringband, you might have heard it by Pete Seeger, Ian Tyson, Frankie Armstrong or Bright Morning Star.

Bob Bossin is widely regarded one of Canada's best songwriters. His subjects range from Yukon wheelers to black baseball, from the cowboys' union to the dog saved Sir Wilfrid Laurier. "I have written a love song," Bossin said "since 1976."

In concert thoughtfulness and storytelling musician, acoustic guitar, banjo Offstage, he written plays and poetry, and cassettes
